LANFest

LANFest is a nonprofit that brings gamers together at local LAN parties to play in person, meet other players, and raise money for charity. These are some awards I've won at LANFest.

- Storage Wars
- Case Mod Contest - Ammo Can - Winner! □□
- Case Mod Contest - Corvette Rim - 2nd Place □□

Storage Wars

LAN Fest, Storage Wars was a competition put on by the organization to gauge who had the most storage in their system. This was also audited by Engineers at Intel to compare who had the most optimal setup if there was a tie. My build at the time had three, 4TB Western Digital Red HDD's in Raid 0 for an onboard NAS and mass storage for my game library. This is obviously not idea but being as SSD's were just being introduced at the time, storage per dollar allowed this to happen. This setup was then moved to an actual NAS on the Garage LAN's server rack, where five more Western Digital Red 4TB HDD's were added for a total of eight but in Raid 6. This was then used as a Steam Cache server, NAS, backup and anything else we wanted to play with.

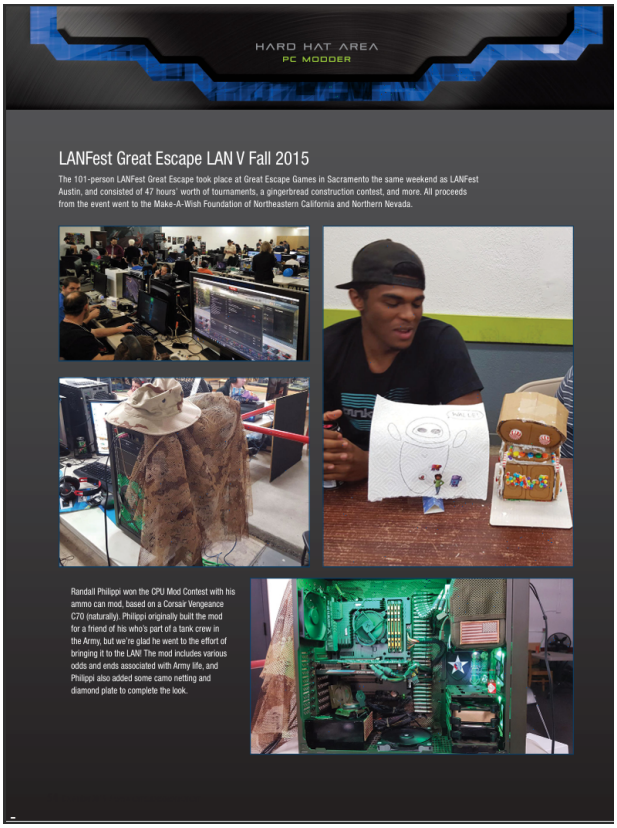

Case Mod Contest - Ammo Can - Winner! □□

The LANFest Case Mod Contest gives PC builders a chance to show off their custom cases. Entering a build was a Garage LAN tradition, and this time we kept ours a surprise. We built a PC inside an ammo can as a thank you to a fellow veteran who volunteered at the Garage LAN and whose son was friends with mine.

The Ammo Can won the contest before we gave it to him. It even made it into the [December 2015 issue of CPU Magazine, on page 54]!

Enjoy the pics!

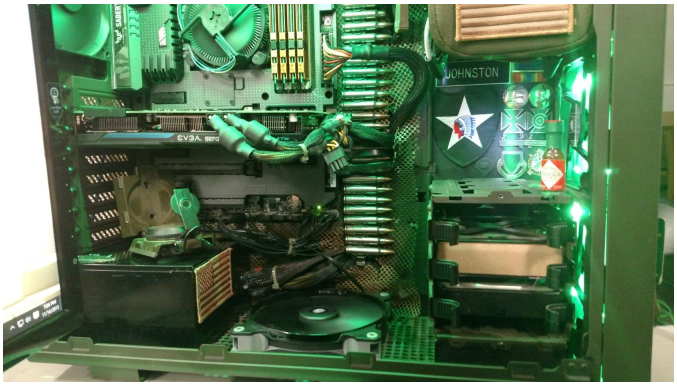

JOHNSTON

Case Mod Contest - Corvette Rim - 2nd Place □□

Mentioned in CPU Magazine for LANFest's Case Mod Contest.

I turned a Corvette rim into a custom PC case and entered it in the LANFest Case Mod Contest. The build took second place and even made it into CPU Magazine! The idea came from one of my daughter's friends, who brought in the rim to be modded. Heading to Les Schwaab to have the tire installed, no parts had to be removed to install the tire, everyone was amazed!

